

National Museum Of Korea

Day 1:

Morning:

- Start your day by heading to the National Museum of Korea, located in Yongsan-gu, Seoul. The museum houses an extensive collection of Korean cultural artifacts and artworks.
- Begin your visit by exploring the permanent exhibitions. These exhibitions showcase various aspects of Korean history, art, and culture, spanning from prehistoric times to the modern era.
- Visit the Ancient History Gallery to learn about Korea's early civilizations, including the Bronze Age, the Three Kingdoms period, and the Unified Silla period. Admire the intricate jewelry, pottery, and Buddhist artifacts on display.

Afternoon:

- Take a break for lunch at one of the museum's cafes or nearby restaurants. The museum offers a variety of dining options to suit different tastes.

- Continue your exploration of the museum by visiting the Medieval and Early Modern History Gallery.

Discover the rich cultural heritage of the Goryeo and Joseon Dynasties through the exhibits of calligraphy, ceramics, and royal treasures.

- If time permits, visit the Asian Art Gallery, which showcases Korean art as well as art from other Asian countries. Admire the diverse collection of paintings, sculptures, and decorative arts.

Evening:

- Enjoy a leisurely stroll in the museum's outdoor garden. The museum is surrounded by a beautiful park where you can relax and enjoy the peaceful ambiance.

- Attend any special exhibitions or events that may be taking place at the museum during your visit. The National Museum of Korea often hosts temporary exhibitions featuring unique themes or collaborations with international museums.

Day 2 (Optional):

Morning or Afternoon:

- If you want to delve deeper into Korean history, you can consider revisiting the museum for another day or splitting your visit over two days.
- Spend more time exploring the areas of the museum that you find most interesting or revisit your favorite galleries.
- Alternatively, you can use this day to explore other attractions in Seoul or visit nearby cultural sites, such as Gyeongbokgung Palace or Changdeokgung Palace, both of which are located within a reasonable distance from the National Museum of Korea.
